Pizza Napoletana

Pizza Napoletana: Gastronomy of Naples, a brief history

Neapolitan pizza, with a soft and thin dough and high edges or "frame" ("Cornicione"), is the Neapolitan version of the classic Italian pizza, moreover, it is also considered by Italians as pizza par excellence, known since 1715 and reported in some historical treaties as a food habit of the city of Naples: the heart of the Neapolitan gastronomy, a symbol of traditional artisan food that characterizes the south of Italy.

This pizza is the evolution of the famous street pizza "pizza a libretto", meaning folded as a book, which was sold in every corner of Napoli by interest free credit or by "oggi a otto" (today at 8) eat today and pay in eight days from now!... no such luck at Bancale 61 though!

The essence of the Neapolitan pizza is due mainly to its base which must be produced with a dough similar to that used for bread - that is to say completely devoid of fats - soft and elastic - using wheat flour and baked in a shallow dome wood burning oven at temperatures around 485 °C, for not more than 90 seconds.

Dough to perfection and a delicate balance of flavours: this is the secret of true Neapolitan pizza.

For Naples, pizza is a symbol of good living and the pizzaiolo an artist!

Buon Appetito!
